Andy Warhol is a visual artist, film director and pop artist. His most famous piece of work is a Campbell's soup can. He lived most of life New York City. There is a whole museum devoted to his work in Pittsburgh (largest museum devoted to a single artist).

Andy Warhol led the Pop Art movement in the 1960s. Pop Art – or 'Popular Art' - used imagery from media, advertising and everyday life to make art. It was made from bright primary colours and hard-edged shapes.

Andy Warhol made most of his pop art by screen printing and collage instead of traditional painting styles. A lot of his work focused on repetition with small changes such as in the colour.

Watercolour paint is an easy medium to use. Colours can be pale or vibrant depending how much water is added. Many different shades of colours can be mixed.
